

Universal Stainless Announces Tool Steel Base Price Increase

BRIDGEVILLE, Pa., June 27, 2008 -- Universal Stainless & Alloy Products, Inc. (Nasdaq:USAP) today announced base price increases of 5% to 7% on all tool steel products manufactured at its Bridgeville and Dunkirk facilities. The increase will be effective with all new orders entered on July 1, 2008. Current material and energy surcharges will remain in effect. Chris Zimmer, Vice President of Sales and Marketing, commented, "The price adjustment is necessary to offset the impact of sharply higher energy and operating costs as we focus on responding to continued strong market demand. This action will enable us to continue our reinvestment in equipment and facilities to better serve our customers."
